DETAILED ACTION

This application has been examined. The claims 1-7 are allowed.

Reasons For Allowance

1. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: The present invention is directed to a character input device for a mobile terminal including a plurality of keys each key being assigned characters of at least two different character type, wherein the mobile terminal is previously set in a character input mode of one of the at least two different character types; while characters of another of the at least two different character types can be selectively input, said character input device comprising: at least temporary mode conversion key included in the mobile terminal; a memory for storing character codes of at least two different character types assigned to each of the plurality of keys. The combination of the closest prior art of Lee (US 6,919,824) and SMETHERS (US 2002/0077156) showed a similar invention, however, they fail to teach that a controller for selecting one of the previously set character input mode and a temporary character mode, based on an input of the temporary mode conversion key, and reading out and recognizing character codes of the at least two different character types from the memory according to the plurality of keys input and the selected character input mode as claim 1; or when a controller recognizes that a temporary mode conversion key is held down while inputting characters, converting a character input mode to a temporary character input mode; and when the controller recognizes that the temporary mode conversion key is released, returning the character input mode to a previously set character input mode as claim 5; or when a controller recognizes that a temporary mode conversion key is pushed while inputting characters, converting a character input mode to a temporary character input mode; and when the controller recognizes that the temporary mode conversion key is pushed again, returning the character input mode to a previously set language character input mode as claim 6.
